Page 2 Comic Strip Name:Adam AmesStrips Available:5Latest Strip:Adam Ames 1960-10-05 - 1961-02-11 | Uploaded: Mar 3, 2013Categories: Mixed BagAdam Ames was a short strip that lasted from 1959 to 1962. The story is a pure soap opera revolving around Adam Ames, a widower, his mistress and two teenage children. Although the strip is not well known, its artist most certainly is! Adam Ames was drafted by Lou Fine. He is considered one of the greatest artists working during golden age comic books. Fine joined the Eisner-Iger comic book store in 1938, where he promoted Wilton from the West, the number of Monte Cristo, and the most famous Flame. He then finished his comic book career drawing in quality comics, where he illustrated Black Condor, Stormy Foster, and Uncle Sam. In 1944 he left comic books to draw Sunday advertising strips, probably for financial reasons. During this time he worked extensively with Don Komisarow. Their works include Charlie McCarthy and Mr. Coffee Nerves on Chase and Sanborn Coffee, and Sam Spade for Wildroot Cream Oil. Adam Ames was up late in Fine's career and followed his last strip, a complete change in the genre with the private eye of Peter Scratch, Will Eisner, called Lou Fine one of the greatest draftsman ever. Joe Simon, named him his: favorite artist.... He was also Jack Kirby's favorite artist. I know that Jack was a fan and greatly influenced fine work. Can there be higher praise? Comic Strip Name:Angel FaceStrips Available:1Latest Strip:Angel Face (1957) | Uploaded: August 19, 2012Categories:Humor | Children / Adolescents | Leading LadiesAngel Face is a feeting series of newspaper panels that reflect a girl who either by accident or by design tends to say the wrong thing at the wrong time. If she doesn't, then the Angel is up to some kind of evil. While at first glance cartoons seem to be aimed at children, humor is actually directed at adults. Angel Face is quite obscure, however it is of interest because the artist is Gene Hazleton. Hazleton joined Disney in 1939, where his animated work can be seen with goat children Fantasia along with the Pleasure Island sequence pinochio. He left Disney in 1941 to join Robert Clampett at Warner Bros. Hazleton then spent many years he worked with Hanna and Barbera on Tom & Jerry as well as Tex Avery shorts. When MGM closed its animation studio, Hazleton freelanced and it was during that period that he created Angel Face. The last big step was Hannah-Barber, where for many years he was the chief artist in the newspaper's comic department. Initially Hazleton supervised the Flintstones and Yogi Bear strips, but then took over both writing and drawing from them. He also helped the animated side and is credited with creating both Pebbles and Bammm Bammm, for the Flintstones. Gene Hazleton died 6 April 2005, aged 85.Comic Strip Title: Between Shots and That Rookie of the 13Th SquadStrips Available: 2Latest Strip: Rookie No. 13 Squad | Uploaded: Nov 2, 2012Categories:Humor | War/Armed ForcesIn this section we have two books, Percy Crosby, which pre-him the most spectacular creation of the popular and critically acclaimed Skippy comic. Crosby enlisted in the Army during World War I, where he was injured in battle and awarded both the Purple Heart and victory medal. Somehow, despite the war wounds, he managed to create these two humorous gems. Its star misadventures and thoughts of a very naive rookie name private dubb. Writing in 1928 Thomas L. Masson said: These sketches were made on no-man's ground. Lying on the ground, with the battle detonating all around him, waiting to move, he had amused himself with these fancies. People in action. They were terribly funny-crude, but what about it? I feared he would spoil them if he put them over with the mechanical atmosphere of a modern studio, or wherever he worked. And so they were reproduced - with some difficulty - just as he drew them. Crosby will soon find fame and fortune with Skippy. But, his personal life suffered from alcoholism, costly lawsuits against Skippy peanut butter (which uses the name without Crosby's permission) and his political outburst. In 1948 he was committed to a psychiatric unit and soon declared paranoid schizoprenia. Percy Crosby died in the shelter on December 8, 1964. The real reasons for his imprisonment are still being challenged, but his artistic talent is not! Comic Strip Name: Bobby Make Believe - Chicago Sunday Tribune (1915-1917) | Uploaded: 18 June 2014Categories:Children/Adolescents | Fantasy/Whimsey | HumorBobby Make-Believe began his short life on the Chicago Tribune Sunday page on January 31, 1915. It is clear that the strip was highly influenced by Winsor McCay's Little Nemo Slumberland, which has already been in operation for 10 years. As the name suggests, Bobby is a bit of a visionary adventure, very much a Walter Mitty mold. The main historical significance of Bobby Make-Believe is that it was Frank King's first successful strip. This was followed by a couple of misses on the heels of Tough Teddy and here comes Motorcycle Mike. Frank King soon had his big hit when Gasoline Alley launched at the end Bobby Make-Believe seems to have had his last dream very soon after. There is no fixed end date, so maybe he is still locked in his last fantasy adventure.Comic Strip Name: Boots and her FriendsStrips Available: 3Latest Strip: Boots and Her Friends on Sundays 1937 | Uploaded: December 18, 2016Categories:Humor | Leading LadiesBoots and Her Friends was created by Edgar Martin and launched as the Newspaper Enterprise Association every day on Monday, February 18, 1924. When we meet Boots (AKA Sweetheart from Comics, Everybody's Sweetheart or Beloved America) she attends an undisclosed college, and from the name of friends there are various amorous beaus who vie for her attention. It took quite a while before Edgar (Abel) Martin allowed Boots to graduate, and for more than twenty years, for her to finally marry successful suitor Rod Ruggles, with whom she is the son of Davey Ruggles. Although she never made it to the movie, Boots did manage a comic book run, and also appeared in Boots and Mystery of the Unlucky Vase, a warime book written and illustrated by Martin in 1943. The daily strip will run until 1960. But Boots still continued on the Sunday Strip, which was launched in 1926 and finally finished her run October 6, 1968.Comic Strip Name: Bringing Up FatherStrips Available: 14Latest Strip: Bringing Up father in 1937 | Uploaded: 18 December 2016Categories:HumorBringing Up Father was created by cartoonist George McManus (1884-1954). Distributed by The King Features Syndicate, it lasted 87 years, from January 12, 1913, to May 28, 2000. Many readers called strips Jiggs and Maggie after its two main characters. Humor centers on an immigrant Irishman named Jiggs, a former hod carrier who entered the wealth of the United States by winning million dollar sweepstakes. Now nouveau rich, he still longs to return to his working class habits and lifestyle. Constant attempts to sneak in with their old pals, eat salted beef and cabbage (Jiggs dinner) and hang out at a local pub were often thwarted by their social climbing (and rolling pin wielding) wife, Maggie, their lovely young daughter, Nora, and infrequently their lazy son Ethelbert later known as Sonny. Between 1935 and 1954, McManus assistant Zeke Zekley made a major contribution to the strip of both writing and art. When McManus died in 1954, the strip continued with other artists, including Bill Kavanagh and Frank Fletcher. Zekley was expected to take over the strip, but instead it was Vernon Greene. The strip's popularity faded, and Bringing Up Father limped together until its 87-year run came to a close on May 28, 2000. It ran in the Daily Mirror from 1937. 22 March 1962 to July 1962. Buck Ryan, strip chief is a young British private investigator who fights crime. His opponents include a lady crime boss in a chair along with various kidnapers and German spies.Comic Strip Title: Buster BrownStrips Available: 5Latest Strip: Buster Brown His Dog Tige and Their Troubles | Uploaded: March 16, 2014Categories:Humor | Kids/TeenagersBuster Brown is a comic character created in 1902 by Richard Felton Outcault, who is known for his association with the Brown Shoe Company. This evil boy was loosely rested on the boy at the Outcault home in Flushing, New York. Buster Brown, his sister Mary Jane, and his dog Tige were well known to the American public in the early 20th century. Tige is believed to be the first talking pet to appear in American comics, and like many of his descendants, his speech goes unnoticed by adults. The comic book began in the New York Herald on May 4, 1902. Outcault went to William Randolph Hearst's employ in 1906, and after a court battle, Outcault continued his band, now unnamed, in Hearst's papers, but the Herald continued its version of Buster Brown with other artists. The last ran until 1911 or so, and the former at least 1921.Comic Strip Name: Captain EasyStrips Available: 21Latest Strip: Captain Easy 1944.04.29 - 1944.04.16 | Uploaded: 18 November 2020Categories: Adventure | CrimeCaptain Easy began its comic life on May 6, 1929 as a sidekick in another of our comics Wash Tubbs. Initially little was known about Easy, except he was a tough Southerner who was looking for adventure. The character proved popular, and June 11, 1933 he began starring in his Sunday strip Captain Easy, Soldier of Fortune. Wash Tubbs and Captain Easy creator Roy Crane drew an early strip. They are considered some of the finest examples of comic art. As the year marched by Easy also became the star of Wash Tubbs daily strip. During World War II, he enlisted in the U.S. Army and became a private detective after demobilization. Meanwhile, Wash Tubbs married, and slipped away in domestic bliss. Captain Easy's, comic life proved rugged as his chin and lasted more than half a century to death in 1988.Comic Strip Name: Charlie ChanStrips Available:14Latest Strip: Charlie Chan Daily Newspaper Strips 1939-05-22 To 1939-12-23 | Uploaded: October 19, 2012Categories:Crime | Detective Chinese-American sleuth Charlie Chan was created by Earl Derr Biggers, and partly based on the actual Honolulu detective, Chang Apana. Although Chan, like his real-life colleague Apana, works for honolulu police he is very much a globe trotter who solves secrets around the world. Charlie Chan debuted a House Without a Key written by Biggers in 1925, with other novels in quick succession. Just one year after he appeared in print Charlie Chan hit the big screen and over the years has appeared in many other film adaptations, along with radio and television shows. (1938-10-24)24 October 1938 McNaught Syndicate launched the Charlie Chan comic. It is notable as the first strip made by Alfred Andriola. He later works for Dann Dunn before launching the strip, for which he is best known for today, the long-running Kerry Drake. Charlie Chan's strip was canceled in May 1942, following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The end of hostilities meant Charlie Chan's relatiated. Although his strip was not resurrected, he appeared in various comic books, including a four-issue run by Charlton and the title set up for the award in comics by Joe Simon and Jack Kirby.Comic Strip Name: Chris WelkinStrips Available:4Latest Strip: Chris Welkin in 1954 | Uploaded: February 14, 2018Categories:Science FictionChris Welkin, Planeteer, distributed by the Newspaper Companies Association from 1952 to 1964. It was created by Art Sansom and Russ Winterbotham. How Sansom recalls: I inherited a weekly strip called Peggy and then about 1950, the NEA decided cowboys were on their way, and the commists were coming for a thing. So I started making a Chris Welkin strip that was every day and Sunday for a couple of years, and then Sunday only about eight years after that. The best was still coming from Art Sansom when his Born Loser debuted on May 10, 1965. The strip and its main character Brutus P. Thornapple became so popular that it was soon syndicated in more than 1,000 newspapers. So despite all his planetary hopping technology Chris Welkin finally lost out to the loser.Comic Strip Name: Comic Strip adsStrips Available:3Latest Strip: Camel CIGS | Uploaded to: Aug 22, 2012Categories: Mixed BagMany years ago advertisers realized that the comic was a great vehicle to promote their products. During the 1950s it was a favorite medium for cigarette manufacturers and R.J. Reynolds was in the forefront. Their Camel brand is already sponsored by the Phil Silvers Show. Ernie Bilko and the rest of the cast were the perfect material for the comic strip, drawn by Bob Bugg. Other featured in the Camel strip include: Hollywood great Henry Fonda Exporsers Lewis N. Collow and Nichol Smith War Workers Jean Curran, Fieda Traynor and WAVE named Phyllis Marguerite The Piazza Soprano, entertainer and later philanthropist Johnnie Parsons winner of the Indianapolis 500 1950 Ruth Kyle MacDonnell, featured on the cover of Time magazine Captain Ben Dix sponsored by Bendix Aviation Corporation. The WwII strip is I know your Tools panel featuring strange and wonderful devices to cut down on a dotted line and save! Philip Morris promote this section with Duke Handy. The strip, which lasted only 6 months in 1958, was written by Allen Saunders and illustrated by Alex Koty. Fists and cigarettes abound in this series! Comic Name: CorkyStrips Available: 4Latest Strip: Corky 1938 | Uploaded: August 11, 2012Categories:Children/Adolescents | HumorCorky has a spinoff of Frank King's Gasoline Alley. It features Walt and Phyllis Walllet's son Corky, born May 1928. The younger brother of Skeezix Mack, he eventually married Hope Hassel on October 1, 1949. He runs a diner in a detached building. Some information is available on this strip. It is assumed to be the bottom filler of Sunday's funny page. While the second in a series of Gasoline Alley's character, Corky managed to star in his film series Corky's Petrol Alley (1951), replacing the Blondie movie series, which ended in 1950 with Beware of blondie. Cork and his sister Judy decide the only way to keep the Wallet family from bankruptcy and insanity is to convince the free-loader to move on. The latter then fakes hurt back. (source: wikipedia) Comic Strip Title: Dan DunnStrips Available: 5Latest Strip: Dan Dunn 1936 | Uploaded: Jul 4, 2018Categories: CrimeDan Dunn is credited as the first fictional character to debut in an American comic book. Quite a claim to fame! He was created by Norman Marsh, and debuted detective Dan, Secret Operative No. 48, in 1933. Humor Publications canceled the title after only one issue (the company only produce a total of three comic strip before folding). But everything was not lost since the same year the Publishers Syndicate launched Dan Dunn's comic. It is quite clear that Dan Dunn is a Dick Tracy clone. He has the same square jaw, and when it comes to taking over criminals, he has the same tendency to violence. Comparisons have also been made between his partner Irwin Higgins and Dick Tracy's Pat Patton. Showing his softer side Dunn is friendly with an orphaned girl named Babs and owns a dog he's called Wolf. Dan Dunn also appeared in 7 Big Little Books and two issue pulp magazines. Although he was never on the silver screen, Dan was appearing in 78 episodes of the 15-minute radio program. The final Dan Dunn strip appeared Sunday, October 3, 1943, as he headed off to war. He still seems to lack action.Comic Strip Name: Denny DreamerStrips Available: 3Latest Strip: Danny Dreamer 1908 | Uploaded: July 26, 2012Categories:Children/Adolescents | Humor by The Fantasys/Whimsey Artist behind Danny Dreamer was a man named Clare Briggs, and added further confusion to his daughter was also named Clare. Briggs was a prolific producer of strips. His first hit was with A. Piker Clerk, who debuted in 1904. His later comics included: When Feller Needs A Friend, Isn't It A Grand and Glorious Feeling? and days of Real Sport. When Briggs died in 1930, Frank P. Adams wrote: I feel the loss of a cartoonist whose work I have enjoyed very much for 30 years. I loved it so much that I got him to leave Chicago so his job could appear in the New York Tribune with mine. It helped the paper so much that Clare stayed there for 15 years, seven years longer than I did. To my point of view, he drew no dud cartoons. I never knew someone who so enjoyed working. Often, in the design of the cartoon I have seen him laugh uproariously at it. He was a sweet and cheerful boy, if a rotten poker player, and a company, for his departure from it, is a big winner having him at all. Comic Strip Name: Dixie DuganStrips Available: 9Latest Strip: Dixie Dugan 1934 | Uploaded: Apr 25, 2019Categories:Managing Ladies | Mixed BagDixie Dugan was created by J.P. McEvoy. She debuted as the star of Show Girl, a somewhat risque novel that was serialized in Liberty magazine in 1928. It soon appeared in book form, along with the Broadway show that produced Ziegfeld, George and Ira Gershwin provided the music and it was immediately turned into a movie. It all happened in 1928. Dixie had hit the road running! In October 1929, Dixie Dugan appeared in her comic book, written by John H. Streibel. A few years later in 1934 she was also given a Sunday page. Initially, the stories were full of humor and showbiz glamour, but as the Great Depression hit, the daily strip became more serious, with Dixie working to support herself and her parents. It also featured romance and suspense stories. By comparison, the Sunday page remained lighter in tone. At the end McEvoy's son Renny was accused of writing the strip. Streibel remained as an artist, but as his health deteriorated a lot of work was done by assistants. Streibel died in 1962 and the strip struggled until 1966.Comic Strip Title: Don Dixon and Hidden EmpireStrips Available: 7Latest Strip: Don Dixon in 1939 | Uploaded: Aug 11, 2012Categories: Science FictionDon Dixon and Hidden Empire launched as a Sunday page on October 6, 1935. It was syndicated by The Daily Eagle, a small newspaper based in Brooklyn. The series was written by Bob Moore, with Carl Pfeufer providing the artwork. The story begins with a young Don and Doctor Lugoff exploring new lands. In their adventures they discover the lost world of Pharia. Don soon finds love interest in the beautiful Princess Wanda and the stage is now set for some magnificent yarn. It's quite notable that Don Dixon has more than a passing reasey with Flash Gordon. In fact, the main difference seems to be while Flash explores the universe, Don Dixon is the most definitely Earth-bound. Don's five-and-a-half year comic run ended on March 6, 1941, but no doubt there have been many untold adventures since that date.Comic Strip Name: Ella CindersStrips Available:14Latest Strip:Ella Cinders 1927.08.08 - 1927.11.05 | Uploaded: 14 February 2018Categories:Humor | Leading LadiesThe name Ella Cinderella Cinderella gives a great clue to the original inspiration for this comic. Contemporary Cinderella, created by writer Bill Conselman and artist Charles Plumb, first made his appearance June 1, 1925. The Sunday page was launched a couple of years later and Ella's run finally finished in 1961. The story began in classical style with stepmother Myrtle Ma Cinderella, in favor of her daughters Prissie and Lotta, while Ella has been sent to household chores. But, Ella is made of sterner stuff and along with her brother Blackie makes light of her lot and even has a friend Waite Lifter. After the victory a dubious prize, Ella Cinderella earns moves to Hollywood, with her brother, to begin a glamorous work that never materializes. Now without drudgery her adventures really begin. As a final note, Ella Cinderella actually took a break, starring in a real movie released in 1926.Comic Strip Name: Flynn JennyStrips Available: 2Latest Strip: Flynn Jenny 1941 0615-1228 | Uploaded: August 11, 2012Categories:Humor | Leading Ladies | AviationFlyin' Jenny, created by Russell Keaton, made her maiden flight in October 1939. Virginia Dare, to give her the correct name was a test pilot at the Starcraft Aviation Factory. Appearing at the beginning of World War II Flyin' Jenny would not be long after the end of hostilities, the strip was discontinued in July 1946. During her seven years of life Jenny was not content with just taking to heaven, but was fighting with master criminals, spies, saboteurs and many other evil doers. Although initially Russell Keaton both wrote and drew the strip, over time others might get involved, including: Glenn Chaffin (co-creator of atespin Tommy), Marc Swayze (now known for his work on Mary Marvel) and Gladys Parker (Mopsy). Keaton died February 13, 1945 at the age of just 35, and a little over a year later Flyin' Jenny made her last flight.Comic Strip Name: Francic SteinStrips Available: 2Latest Strip: Francic Stein 02 | Uploaded: May 15, 2014Categories: AdventureFrancic Stein was short during 1947, and was prepared by George Mercer (October 1, 1923 - August 12, 2012). He was a prolific cartoon and comic book artist. African-American, his work also includes: Solid Senders, Rickey, Arline's Career and Pee Wee. Later George Mercer became an artist for the U.S. Postal Service, nine of his designs were selected for individual stamps or postage stamps on embossed envelopes. These include a 15 cent uncle Sam's Top Hat relief envelope and a 12 cent freedom of conscience. Later printed in 1981, there is a maroon on the beige stamp of the Americana Issue celebrating the freedom of conscience. It pictures a torch from the Statue of Liberty with the wording Freedom conscience-American Right. Comic Strip Name: Gasoline AlleyStrips Available:14Latest Strip: Gasoline Alley 1922 | Uploaded: March 29, 2015Categories:Cars | HumorGasoline Alley made his low-key debut in the Chicago Tribune Syndicate, November 24, 1918. It was the beginning of a journey that continues to this day. Gasoline Alley is credited as the first comic book in which characters age normally, and also be one of the first soap operas in any environment. The strip was created by Frank King with a mission from chicago tribune publisher, Colonel Robert McCormick, to create a strip to appeal to a new generation of car owners and mechanics. The main characters include: Walt Walllet - auto fanatic, head of family and strip central character Phyllis Walllet - married Walt June 24, 1926 and died April 26, 2004 in Skeezix Walllet - Walt adopted a son, found his son February 14, 1921 Avery – Walt's rather cantankerous neighbor Pert – the rich evil and frequent villain of the piece Comic Strip Name: Invisible Scarlet O'NeilStrips Available: 4Latest Strip: Invisible Scarlet O'Neil 1942 Spring | Uploaded: Sep 16, 2016Categories:Superhero | Leading LadiesInvisible Scarlet O'Neil was written and composed by Russell Stamm, who previously worked for Dick Tracy. She first appeared on the pages of the Chicago Times, June 3, 1940. Scarlet O'Neil's claim to fame is one of the first superheroes. As her name suggests Scarlet has the right invisibility. This power was created when Scarlet put her finger in an experimental ray created by her scientist father. She suddenly disappeared, but luckily figured that touching the nerve in her arm acted as a switch so she could turn her invisibility off and in a row. Over time, Scarlet O'Neil's special talent slowly dropped from the strip until it was renamed only Scarlet O'Neil in 1950. A year later, a new character called Stainless Steel was introduced. In 1955 the strip was retitled Stainless Steel, immediately folding the following year. As for Scarlet O'Neil she has yet to shut her off her invisibility and no one knows where she is.Comic Strip Title: Joe PalookaStrips Available:19Latest Strip: Joe Palooka 1940 | Uploaded: Dec 18,

2016Categories:Boxing/Martial Arts | Humor by Sport1921. In 2000, Arm Fischer, a young sports reporter, met a boxer named Pete Latzo outside the pool. As he later recalled: Here, in order, was the comic book character I was looking for – a big, good-footed prize fighter who didn't like to fight; Defender little guys; Gentle knight. I ran back to the office, drew a set of strips and rushed to the newspaper syndicates. Despite his continued efforts, Fisher had to wait almost a decade before the strip began. His breakthrough finally came when working as a salesman for the McNaught Syndicate hawking the recently launched Dixie Dugan. He managed to sign up more than 20 newspapers for his strip, and Charles V. Adams McNaught's general manager agreed to give Joe Palooka a trial. Launching in April, 1930 Joe Palooka soon proved to be a sporting success. In 1932 he was the star of a short-lived radio show and in 1934 he starred in a low-budget film. This was followed by a series of shorts and later television series. He also appeared in many comic books with his compatriots Little Max and Humphrey Pennyworth. Ham Fisher, the creator of Palooka, committed suicide in December 1955. Joe did, however, lived much longer, his final newspaper strip appeared on November 24, 1984. Thompson and Coll continued to work on both strips until they folded a few years later. One thing to be aware of is that Myra North is not quite the person you imagine. Although she is indeed a nurse, Myra spends much of her time investigating spies, supercriminals and other evil employees. So the strip is the most is not a medical soap opera. In 1938 Myra appeared in The Big Little Book, but it was about her juks to leave her newspaper strips. The days ended on March 25, 1939, but she continued to make regular appearances on Sundays until August 31, 1941. And that was the end of Myra North! Comic Strip Name: Oaky DoaksStrips Available:5Latest Strip:Oaky Doaks 1939 | Uploaded: Jan 9, 2014Categories:Humor | Fantasy/WhimseyOaky Doaks was created by Bill McCleery, comic editor of the Associated Press and illustrated by cartoonist Ralph Fuller. The strip debuted June 17, 1935 and the Sunday edition was added later in 1941. The strip set in medieval times centers on Oaky Doaks, a farm boy who wore suit armor that he had made of tin roof in a barn. His sword is named Nellie, and before joining Oaky in his adventures, pulled his father's plow. Oaky Doaks has the usual knightly adventures, fighting dragons and saving girls in danger. But as he is just a simple lad a lot of mayhem ensues. For years Oaky Doaks spent a rather round King Cedric, who really wasn't fit for kingly duties. Later Oaky strikes out on his own and settles in uncertainia. Here he marries the beautiful daughter of King Proud, Princess Pomona, who has a son. Perhaps he's still there because that's the last we heard about him, back in 1961. This is a parody of the very popular superheroes of the day. The story begins with Sparky Watts making his way through college, selling magazines from door to door. One day he knocks off the house of Doctor Static and the deal is struck. The doctor buys all the magazines if Sparky is a guinea pig for his cosmic ray experiments. In the traditional style he is now suddenly blessed with superhuman powers, becoming the world's strongest man. Apart from his incredible speed and stamina, his head is so strong that artillery shells bounce off it. At home level Sparky now needs to use blowtorch to shave! Stories that often center around Doc Sparks latest experiment include other regular characters: Slap Happy - a bald-headed sidekick, providing muscle and have massive legs Yoo Hoo - little Chinese boy Hattie - who seems to be nothing more than a top-hat and legs goober - a dog that owns the Doctor Static Comic Strip Name: Terry and PiratesStrips Available: 58Latest Strip: Terry and Pirates 14 C) Burma's return to Beowulf | Uploaded: 20 Feb 2011Categories:Adventures | Children / Adolescents | Pirates Classic adventure comic. The King Features strip was designed as a replacement for Ed Wheelan's Midget Movies (he had moved to create Minute Movies). The original strip parodied popular movies and playing time. The two main characters were Castor Oyl and his friend, Ham Gravy. In case you haven't guessed what comes Castor had a sister named Olive. All three appeared together for almost 10 years until January 17, 1929 a new and now very familiar character made his first appearance. Castor Oyl and Ham Gravy were down at the docks and as Don Markstein tells us: Hey there! Are you a sailor? The castor is called a one-eyed man wearing a marine outfit, with an anchor tattooed on his arm. If I think I'm a cowboy? said Popeye, who at that time became an integral part of the smear theater cast. Within a year, Ham was written from the strip and Popeye replaced him as the beloved castor's sister, Olive. Wimpy was added to the cast in 1932, and Swee'pea in 1936. And the rest is the history ;Wood strip Name: Vignettes LifeStrips Available:4Latest Strip: Vignettes of Life - Frank Godwin 1927 | Uploaded: May 23, 2013Categories: HumorVignettes life is a weekly pseudo comic book by Frank Godwin, who is better known for his work on Connie and Rusty Riley. He also drew some Wonder Woman stories. It's not exactly a comic, but exactly as it says vignettes. It often appeared in newspaper magazines, not with comics. It was syndicated by the Philadelphia Ledger, printed in color or in smaller newspapers in black and white. Blogger Tom Sawyer writes: Frank Godwin's Vignettes of Life was a tour de force, especially for art. It was also a very amusing feature, and it tends to prove an offer that people don't really change. People were the same in 1924 as they are today. Comic Strip Name: War On CrimeStrips Available:10Latest Strip:War on Crime C1-78 Dillinger August 17 to November 14, 1936 | Uploaded to: Nov 2, 2012Categories: CrimeWar on Crime was conceived, at least in part, by none other than FBI Director Edgar J. Hoover, who intended it as a public relations exercise. It was designed to counteract the current depictions of G-men as lone mavericks. Instead, the strip showed the FBI as a formidable and well-oerated organization that was under the direct control of the director. The strip started on May 18, 1936, appearing in 45 newspapers. It was written by crime reporter Rex Collier, who was a personal friend of Hoover. The illustrations were originally provided by Kemp Sterrett, who after a year was replaced by Jimmy Thompson. All the stories featured in the war on crime were real-life cases, and personally vetd by Hoover. The strip chronicled the demise of such infamous characters as: Ma Baby Face Nelson and John Dillinger. They all met their ends thanks to the expertise and scientific methodology used throughout the FBI. Well, that's the way the war on crime told stories! The strip finished its running on January 22, 1938. This was partly due to the fact that the real-life material worked thin. The second reason is that the general public many prefer their crime busters to be daredevil heroes who are cut by bureaucracy. This fact is still good! Comic Name: Wash TubbsStrips Available: 9Latest Strip: Wash Tubbs 19440904-19441208 | Uploaded: Jul 31, 2009Categories: Adventure | HumorThe date is April 14, 1924 and Washington Tubbs II, a young bubbling store manager makes his comic debut. It started life as a daily gag about Tubbs's misadventures, but soon expanded to storylines. Only 12 weeks later the strip was restored. Its creator, Roy Crane, moved Tubbs from comfort store to life in the circus. Suddenly Tubbs became a man of adventure and often claimed that the former store manager was the precursor to Buck Rogers and Dick Tracy. Bull Dawson, Wash's arch-enemy was introduced in 1926. But Tubbs is not a fighter needing some muscle to deal with him. After some attempts to find a suitable character Roy Crane introduced Captain Easy on May 6, 1929. A tough Southerner was exactly what was needed. In fact, he eventually stole the show, had the same Sunday strip and in 1949 every day was renamed Captain Easy. Fortunately we have examples in our Captain Easy section. Tubbs made rare visits to the strip, possibly married life and the birth of twins kept him busy. In 1983 Captain Easy's strip completed, and with it any chance of message Tubbs Comic Strip Name: Yellow KidStrips Available: 4Latest Strip: Yellow Kid (1895) | Uploaded: Jul 28, 2012Categories:Humor | Children/TeenagersThe Yellow Kid was created and prepared by Richard F. Outcault. Real name Mickey Dugan, he had a bald name and was probably shaved after the lice were found. He sported a large yellow hand-me-down nightgown, he put it on the title. As a device, the shirt was what the child said printed on it. The Yellow Kid made his appearance as a supporting character in Truth Magazine in 1894. Due to his popularity he then became the star of Hogan's Alley (a fictional slum area of New York City). This first appeared in the New York world, which Joseph Pulitzer published in 1895. Soon the color was introduced, leading the way to Hogan's Alley and its star Yellow Kid becoming a full page Sunday color cartoon.
